WOMAN AND SAYS SHE IS HONEST AND CONSIDERATE.

Few roof gardens have been more attractive during the last summer than that of the model tene-ment-house in West Sixty-eighth-st. Every apartment in this house has been filled throughout the season by women. Without design or purpose on part of the stockholders or managers, this model tenement has been occupied almost exclusively since its opening, last February, by women-widows and backelor maids. They are largely trained nurses, private teachers, stenographers and not a few artists, the northern light being particularly desirable in the sixth-story apartments. Much ordinality exists among the tenants, and they have not been slow to utilize the roof, which commands an unrivalled view of the Hudson and catches every breeze that blows. Hammocks have been swung, rugs spread and divans improvised, until the Hanging Gardens of Habylon might not blush to be compared with this New-York one.

We could fill," said the manager, "two similar buildings from our waiting list of women, so successful is the present house."

The rest collector is a woman, Miss Beakman, whose success in seeling the houses of the City and Suburban Homes Company led to her present place. "Our best tenants are the self-supporting women," said Miss Beakman to a Tribune reporter, "I visit the apartments once a week, and each tenant has her rest ready. They appreciate the fact that it is value for value received, and always pay promptly. Generally, they invite me into their apartments. On the whole, women like the idea of a woman rest-collector. Her presence does not mecasitate change of toiler, which the visit of a man collector often imposes—an ordeal particularly trying during the hot days of the last season, when negligée toiler prevailed on every side. In the Sixty-eventh sit tenement, which has some three hundred tenants families of from two to five members, the women frequently are reluctant to let me in. They have the money ready, and hand it out through a small opening of the door. As a rule such tenants prove undestrable, and soon move out. They know they are untidy, and shrink from critical inspection. The woman rent-collector has a great field for good, and can be of incalculable such tenants prove undestrable, and soon move out. A LANDLADY FRAISES THE SELF-SUPPORTING FRANCES WILLARD'S BEAUTIFUL TRIBUTE TO THE STRUCTURE OF THE WOMAN'S CHRIS-TIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Will the structure known as the Woman's Temple, built with the contributions of temperance workers in every State, be saved and dedicated as a memorial to the greatest woman of the century, or will it be abandoned as a badly managed business enterprise, for which the great temperance organization will disclaim all financial responsibility and which will be declared unfit to commemorate the illustrious career of the great field marshal of the temperance hosts? These questions will be decided at the National convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, to be held at St. Paul from November II to 16 next. It will not be the first time that the Temple controversy has occupied the attention of the annual convention. At the convention a year ago, the Temple project was saved by the elo-quence of Frances Willard, who made a stirring appeal for the enterprise, and rallied a majority of the delegates once more to its support. To show her faith in the Temple and her belief that the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union was under an obligation of henor to pay off the $300,000 trust bonds that were issued to secure con-trol of the structure, Miss Willard promised to devote the fifty-ninth year of her life to securing con-tributions for wiping out the debt. On the Inside of the grantic arch, through which you pass into the lobby, is a seal with the name of every State in the Union carved on it. The lobby leads into a marble corridor, which has a total length of one hundred and twenty-five feet. Near the entrance stands the handsome Chautauqua fountain, given by the people of Chautauqua Countay, N. Y., the birthplace of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. It was chiselled from Italian marble and alabaster, and contains the bronze figure of a boy holding a dolphin. From the mouth of the dolphin flows a stream of cold water. The corridor is paved with Florentine mosaic, and is wainscotted, planelled and celled with a variety of chicke marbles. On the panels are inlaid in gold, by States, the names of unions that have given slio or more toward paying for the Temple. most beautiful auditorium of its size in this country.

In paying a beautiful tribute to the Temple, Miss Willard wrote, in 1855;

"Minerva's Temple dominated the Acropolis at Athens beside the Mediterranean Sea; the Temperance Temple at Chicago stands beside Lake Michigan. The first dedicated to Wisdom's goddess, the emblem of man's rea in the last to Christianity, the fulliment of man's faith. The woman's statue that crowned the one wore a heimet and grasped a shield; that which will crown the other has hands outstretched in blessing and face upturned in prayer. Athens marked with classic temple the loftlest height that man has reached alone; Chicago's Temple holds aloft on Gothic spires that blessed cross which is the only lever that raises woman up and with her lifts toward Heaven the world.

Since history began no edifice so unique and beautiful as this has ever been reared for philanthropic purposes, and it is confessedly the finest architecturally of any office-building on the globe."

SLEEPING-CARS FOR SOLDIERS.

Through the courtesy of Dr. Seward Webb and J. C. Yager the Auxiliary for the Maintenance of Trained Nurses has been able to lease two Wagner sleeping-cars, the Wayne and the Franconia, to be placed on the Long Island Railroad, running be-tween Montauk and Long Island City. On each of these cars will be praced trained nurses from Bellevue and attendant physicians, and they will be provided with such supplies as may be found necessary. The nurses, under the direction of the sur-geon, will be prepared to minister to the needs of the other soldiers if required. It is thought that this arrangement will be of great practical value in returning the troops to their homes with less fatigue than is possible under ordinary conditions of travel. These cars will be retained as long as they will be of the slightest use to the soldiers. President Baldwin of the Long Island Railroad, who has been exceedingly courteous, will personally supervise the preparation of the cars. Dr. Brewer, a Rel Cross physician, will be present to attend to the men.

THE TRIBUNE PATTERN.

A TISSUE PAPER PATTERN OF WAIST. NO. 7.4%, FOR COUPON AND 10 CENTS.

Hydrangea-blue silk woven with bayadere stripes of white, that form a double cord, is here delightfully combined with a square voke plastron of finely tucked mousseline de sole inlet, with lace insertion over white satin. The tiny revers that roll back from the fronts are faced with white satin. Applique bands of white embroidered chiffon form the handsome decoration around the square-cut neck and on the edges of each front, epaulet and

The stylish arrangement of the weist is made over perfectly fitted linings that close in centre front. The seamless back can have the yoke applied over the material, or the material can be out away to give the fashionable guimpe effect, or it can be of one fabric if so preferred. The yoke plastron is included in the right shoulder seam, its edges being secured to the lining under right front, while the left edge and shoulder are finished separately and provided with hooks to close at the shoulder and under left front. The standing collar, made to match the yoke, is joined to the neck and closes at the left side. The back is drawn with slight fulness at the waist line, while the front is arranged in the fashionable and becoming pouch. A fancy beit, or one of the material, can be worn

Stylish sieeves, only slightly full, are arranged over fitted linings, smooth epaulets with square ends falling gracefully over the top. Soft frillings ends failing gracefully over the top. Sort frilings of mousseline de soie with ruched edges finish the neck and wrists. Charming combinations of material and coloring can be readily developed by the mode, which lends itself to all qualities and kinds of material and any style of trimmling.

To make this waist for a woman of inedium size two yards of material, 44 inches wide, will be required. The pattern, No. 7.421, is cut in sizes for a 32, 34, 26, 38 and 40 inch bust measure.
